

Our award winning Swana Shining Light piece will be presented in Debswana 45th Anniversary celebrations! Congratulations and keep up the good work.

Designed by Olorato Temogo (from Botswana) who explained his inspiration: " Inspired by the sacrifices african women have made to make Africa one of the admirable continent, the antelope horns in the necklace symbolises their endless efforts to fight the social ills like gender inequality, lack of political stability, racism, The colour of the neck lace is black and white symbolising that regardless of the skin colour people can live together in peace and achieve alot as a nation, a continent as well as the world at large.

The African basket shows that although African women are fighting to stop all the social ills they also play a part in preserving our culture as Africans. The basket also symbolises the role played by women on beautifying our continent as baskets are used for decorations but remember African women do so bearing in mind to use their resources wisely hence taking care of the environment. The basket also serve as a tourist attraction thus the grow of the African economy there-by African women are indeed shining the light." isn't it extremely inspiring??
